OVERVIEW

I am a scholar of the history of women, gender, and sexuality, with a focus on social movements in the post-1945 U.S. Trained as an historian, I employ interdisciplinary feminist research methods and engage in public history collaborations with scholars, cultural institutions, and community groups. At RIT, I teach courses in History; Women's, Gender, and Sexuality Studies; Museum Studies; and Digital Humanities. My scholarship, which includes peer-reviewed articles, book chapters, and books as well as the creation of oral history and digital archives, and my public history practice, which includes exhibitions and programming, inspire and inform each other. I am also an accomplished administrator, having served as both a department chair and program director and successfully launched two new undergraduate degrees.

EDUCATION

CURRENT PROJECTS

Co-PI with Susan Lakin (Professor of Photography, RIT), Third Ward/Clarissa St. Augmented Reality Project. This augmented reality project aims to virtually reconstruct Rochester’s once-thriving Black commercial and residential neighborhood that was destroyed during the 1964 Racial Uprising and subsequent urban renewal. My role in the project includes archival and oral history research and coordination of our Humanities Experts Advisory Board. We have received internal grants from RIT that allowed us to develop in summer 2022 a prototype of the Pythodd jazz club, which is the first building we are reconstructing. We will publish the prototype to the Apple and Google app stores in winter 2024 and have applied for funding from the ACLS Digital Justice grants.

“Organizing for LGBTQ workplace rights in the 1990s: The Kodak Lambda Employee Network,” article manuscript in preparation for submission to the journal The Public Historian. This research is part of a long-term, book-length project, “We Were All Kodakers Then”: Rochester, New York and the Eastman Kodak Company.
